Ask, Listen, Learn: Kids and Alcohol Don't Mix, is a multimedia program developed by The Century Council and Nickelodeon that helps facilitate conversations between parents and their children before they are confronted with the opportunity to drink alcohol. It is evident that the conversations are needed and make a difference; 65 percent of adolescents say parents are their leading influence not to drink. This successful national program is brought to Arizona through a partnership between the Arizona Attorney General's Office and the Arizona Alliance of Boys & Girls Clubs.
